Because admission personnel at Lindner Center for Hope said they could not read the doctor's order, and following a brief evaluation, Makensie was turned away. After her arrival and rejection, the facility did offer to make an appointment for her for April 7, 2011, Sharon Hay said.

"The center later left a voice mail for Makensie informing her the appointment had been canceled over concerns her insurance plan may not pay for the treatment," Sharon Hay said.

"It was about 10 a.m., March 23, (2011)" Gary Hay said. "I heard the voice mail."

"She was devastated," her mother added.

FROM PART II

On March 7, 2011, Makensie Hay Youngman's doctor prescribed admission to Lindner Center of Hope, a facility in Cincinnati, her mother, Sharon Hay said last week.

"The doctor even had his office call before they went, requesting she be admitted," Sharon Hay said.

A comment from her doctor before her attempt to get in the center still bothers Makensie's father.

"He told her it was hard to get into the facility and that you almost had to arrive with your wrists slit to get admitted," Gary Hay said. "Who says that to someone with her history?"

When she arrived, the appearance of the facility gave Makensie hope, her mother said. According to Hay, Makensie, sitting in the waiting room with her suitcase, told (her husband) Ashley (Youngman), "This might be the place."

According to the Lindner Center, insurance and private pay options are available to patients.

LEWIS COUNTY Fight for Food project kicks off

MARLA TONCRAY
marla.toncra@lee.net

A new project in Lewis County will introduce middle school students to the art of growing a vegetable garden.

The Lewis County Fight for Food project will kick off within the next weeks at Lewis County Middle School, where students will learn everything from tilling the ground to harvesting vegetables over the course of the spring and summer.

The project has been funded by an $8,600 grant awarded by the Appalachian Regional Commission, through the Brushy Fork Institute in Berea in conjunction with many Lewis County organizations, businesses and the school district.

Facelift could be in future for MHS Apartments

marla.toncra@lee.net

The Maysville High School Apartments could get a facelift, if an application for federal tax credits gets approval.

The Wallick-Hendy Development company out of Reynoldsburg, Ohio has plans to rehabilitate the building, which was constructed in 1908.

The company is making application to the Kentucky Housing Corporation for funding and tax credits under Internal Revenue Code Section 42, as well as tax credits for a historic structure.

The building was converted into 29 apartments in 1996, five years after the school closed following consolidation with Mason County School District.

Bonnie Harbage, with Wallick-Hendy said if funding is secured, her company plans to maintain the historic components of the building including the exterior, interior stairwells, and wooden trim work and doors.

Harbage said her company has completed other historic building rehabilitations and the intent of the project will be to bring the building up to like new conditions.

The firm received the support of city officials Tuesday morning during a special city commission meeting in which a resolution was passed to submit a letter of support for the project.

Harbage said the application deadline is April 9 and funding from KHC will be announced in June.

Harbage said if the funding isn't approved, improvements will be delayed until the next round of funding is available.

Justices signal deep trouble for health care law

MARK SHERMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON | The fate of President Barack Obama's health care overhaul was cast into peril Tuesday as the Supreme Court's conservative justices sharply and repeatedly questioned its core requirement that virtually every American carry insurance. The court will now take up whether any remnant of the historic law can survive if that linchpin fails.

The justices' questions in Tuesday's hearing carried deeply serious implications but were sometimes flavored with fanciful suggestions. If the government can force people to buy health insurance, justices wanted to know, can it require people to buy burial insurance? Cellphones? Broccoli?

The funds will be used to incubate a small community garden at Lewis County Middle School and to provide an educational program benefiting local school children as well as the county’s vulnerable population, according to Anita Gilbert, with Lewis County CARES.

“We want to involve family members and students to help them get back to the roots of growing their own foods and preparing their own foods,” Gilbert said. “It’s all about becoming self-sustainable.”

Students at LCMS will learn every aspect of cultivating a vegetable garden through hands-on experience. Gilbert said once the vegetables are ripe and ready to harvest, they will be utilized in local food preparation classes for families, as well as in local restaurants.

A display card will be available at the restaurant to explain the project. Project plans also call for an “End of Harvest Year” party, where students will be served a meal prepared with the vegetable they grew.

In addition to the garden project, Lewis County Fight for Food will utilize the YMCA’s 5-2-1-0 program aimed at bringing awareness to the daily guidelines for nutrition and physical activity.

The 5-2-1-0 program promotes consuming five or more servings of fruits and vegetables each day, limiting recreational screen time in front of computers and TVs to two hours or less a day, getting at least one hour of physical activity a day, and consuming zero sugary drinks while drinking more water and low fat milk.

Sixth grade students will also participate in a “My Plate” project, fashioned from the USDA model of the updated food pyramid. Students will receive education in nutrition, health, food production and preparation through the process. The “My Plate” project will allow students to paint a white ceramic plate with their interpretation of the new food pyramid; the plates will be fired in a kiln and then placed on display at the Lewis County Library for a period of time before the students take them home.

Gilbert said volunteers from the community are needed to assist the students with the garden throughout the growing and harvesting season.

Community partners of the Lewis County Fight for Food project are Lewis County Educational Foundation, Lewis County CARES, Take Action for Wellness in Lewis County coalition, PrimaryPlus, Lewis County School System, Lewis County 4-H Club, Lewis County Extension Office, The Pottery Place, local restaurants, local greenhouse owners, community volunteers, and many others.

RUN-AROUND

FROM A1

“Insurance creates the access,” said Jennifer Pierson, Lindner Center spokesperson on Friday. “They do have the option of paying out of pocket.”

The Hay family disputes the claim.

“They never even gave us the option of paying if the insurance had not paid,” said Gary Hay.

In the category of admissions, Lindner’s website lists “Demonstrates a danger to self, others or property; Manifest major impairment in activities of daily living and in occupational functioning; Demonstrates continued decline in functioning manifested by impairment in ability to provide for his/her basic physical needs; and, Condition prevents him/her from benefiting from less intensive levels of care.” for reasons to be admitted.

According to Pierson, unable to discuss specific cases, discussions are held over the phone with potential patients to help prevent anyone from traveling to the facility only to be denied admission.

“In the case of people in Kentucky, in a case of life or death, we do not recommend that they try to come here, but should go to a local hospital,” Pierson said.

Rejected, desperate and in fear, on March 23, 2011, Makensie turned to University of Cincinnati Hospital and was told her best bet was to come to the emergency room to be admitted that day.

“She texted me she was going to UC because they could not do what Lindner had done to her,” Sharon Hay said.

It was later when Hay learned the Lindner Center is an affiliate of University of Cincinnati Hospital.

By the time Ashley and Makensie Youngman got to the hospital, it was late afternoon. Following a routine questionnaire, despite her condition and past history of suicide attempts, she was again turned away, Sharon Hay said.

On March 24, 2011, Makensie was at home with Ashley, “and sick to her stomach about UC,” Sharon Hay said.

Ashley was there until about 2 p.m., when he was called in to work.

“He said she was going to eat a snack and try to nap. She knew I’d be by in about an hour,” Sharon Hay said. “She told him she was doing better.”

A short time later, unable to reach her daughter by phone, finding the door unlocked and Makensie’s bed empty, Sharon Hay called her husband and Ashley for help.

She later found Makensie in a dark place in the basement.

This time there were no pills and would be no recovery.

This time her daughter used a gun to fight her darkness, Sharon Hay said.

As a side note, having a gun in the home was not unusual; Makensie was a “tom girl,” her mother said, and had never shown interest in anything but sport hunting with weapons.

Sharon Hay is torn between anguish and anger over the struggle her daughter faced.

On the paperwork obtained by Bracken County Coroner John Parker from Lindner Center and UC Hospital, and given to Ashley Youngman and the Hays, it was clear notations were made about a past of suicide attempts, but on the suicide lethality scale of the

LOCAL HOPE

- As of February 2012, adults in need of short-term psychiatric stabilization treatment now have a place to turn to in the Buffalo Trace region.
- Comprehend, Inc. opened an Adult Crisis Stabilization Unit in Maysville for individuals who are experiencing an acute reaction to a crisis event, officials said.
- Dr. Pamela Vaught, chief executive officer of Comprehend cited examples of an acute reaction as someone who may be going through a divorce and is experiencing severe depression or suicidal thoughts; or a person diagnosed with schizophrenia who has taken themselves off their medicines and needs clinical assistance to restore the medication schedule.
- Vaught said establishing an ACSU for the region has been part of Comprehend’s five-year plan because currently, adults in need of treatment must travel to Ashland, Lexington or Cincinnati.
- Referrals to the ACSU can be made at 1-877-852-1523. Referrals can be made by individuals, family members, doctors, police, or concerned citizens and are accepted 24 hours a day.

evaluation sheets, under previous attempts a zero was written.

“She was asked if she had a plan on how she would attempt suicide,” Sharon Hay said. “She said she didn’t have a plan, so they refused to admit her. She wanted help; she tried to get help; she didn’t want to live her entire life in such a battle.”

The Hays are also looking for alternatives to medications, which influence already vulnerable people.

“You see it on television all the time, “may cause suicidal thoughts”; what do they think that message sends to someone who is already having those thoughts, that are on the medication,” Sharon Hay said.

Changes in evaluation standards, insurance requirements and local availability of treatment facilities are needed, Sharon Hay said.

According to her parents, Lindner Center, upon learning of Makensie’s death, sent a letter to Ashley reiterating they had not treated Makensie, just performed an evaluation.

On the envelope in the file Ashley had changed the return address of the center from “Center of Hope” to “Center of Rejection” with a marker pen.

“He is going like the rest of us. He is so frustrated that he didn’t know how to help her,” Sharon Hay said. “We all did what we could.”

Communication between doctors and treatment facilities need to be better and admission criteria needs to be made on a person-by-person basis, not just a checklist, Sharon Hay said.

According to Pierson, each patient is evaluated as an individual.

“We don’t want anyone who was in the state our daughter was in to be turned away from treatment,” Sharon Hay said. “There has to be change. What she went through was unnecessary and that phone call canceling her appointment was cruel.”

The family now has little confidence in the medical community.

Sharon Hay credits the positive efforts of friends and family, including the upcoming unveiling of artwork in her memory, with helping the entire family cope with the loss of Makensie.

In April, a massive artwork project honoring Makensie, with input from her family and friends and other families who have lost loved ones, will be unveiled at the Children’s Wing of the Bracken County Library in Brooksville.

Man accused of murder

HARRY SHAFER

KAREN STEIN

MOUNT ORAB, Ohio | A man was arrested for first-degree murder after he allegedly shot his stepson in a home located just north of Mount Orab Monday evening, according to the Brown County Sheriff.

Joshua E. Ahr, 33, of Mount Orab, was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. Timothy McKinley, Brown County coroner, according to reports. The victim died of a gunshot wound to the side, according to a preliminary investigation by deputies.

Brown County deputies were dispatched from Brown County 911 Communications at 5:35 p.m., according to reports.

The victim's family called 911 communications immediately following the incident, according to Deputy Chief John Schadle. However, the victim died before deputies arrived, he said.

Ahr's stepfather, Harry Donald Shafer, 56, of Greenbush East Road, Mount Orab, was arrested as a suspect.

Schadle said because it is early in the investigation he could not comment at this time why Shafer was arrested as a suspect.

Shafer was transported to Brown County Adult Detention Center, where he is being held with no bond. He is charged with first-degree murder and is awaiting arraignment on the charge, according to the sheriff.

The case is being investigated by the Brown County Sheriff Dwayne Wenninger and the Brown County Coroner's Office, according to deputy reports.

POLICE INVESTIGATE SATANIC SIGNS ON CHURCH

MELBER | Police in western Kentucky are investigating after satanic signs were scrawled on a church in western Kentucky.

Kentucky State Trooper Michael Robichaud told The Paducah Sun that bright red spray-paint was used to write "Hail Satan," "666," and draw a star on the outside walls of Gospel Light Missionary Baptist Church in Graves County. He called the actions "very disturbing."

A neighbor reported seeing the images Saturday afternoon at the church on Kentucky 945, just south of Melber.

Pastor Jackie E. Thomas said he hopes publicity about the incident will help people realize how important their Christian faith is and bring them back to God.

"I'm not going to plan on cleaning it up until I can get as much publicity as I can," he said.

Thomas said he feels for his congregation of about a dozen people, but he is more worried about the souls of the vandals. — AP

POWER AT EASTERN KY. CITY HALL CUT BRIEFLY

BENHAM | The lights are back on at an eastern Kentucky city hall after briefly being cut in a dispute over the power bill.

Benham Mayor Johnny Dodd told the Harlan Daily Enterprise that there was a disagreement about the amount owed, which led to the power being cut off Monday for about three hours. He says city officials sat down with power board officials and resolved the matter quickly.

Dodd says the action didn't disrupt city business. He says officials ran an extension cord from a firehouse and were able to use computers, lights and cash registers.

He praised the power board for taking the action it did, saying members were appointed and he's glad they have the "nerve" to make such a bold move. — AP

STUDENTS SUSPENDED FOR DRUG-LACED BROWNIES

LOUISVILLE | Jefferson County Public Schools officials have booted 11 students out of school after drug-laced brownies were shared.

At least two parents have filed appeals to their children being suspended after a student brought the brownies, into which marijuana had been baked, to Eastern High School last week.

Crystal Fuller told the station her 14-year-old son didn't realize the snacks had been tampered with and threw away most of the one he had been given because it didn't taste good.

School officials said Fuller's son and another student were back in school Monday morning, pending the outcome of that appeal.

It wasn't yet clear whether criminal charges would be filed against the student who officials said brought in the brownies. — AP

TRAFFIC DELAYS EXPECTED WHILE BRIDGE REPAIRS MADE

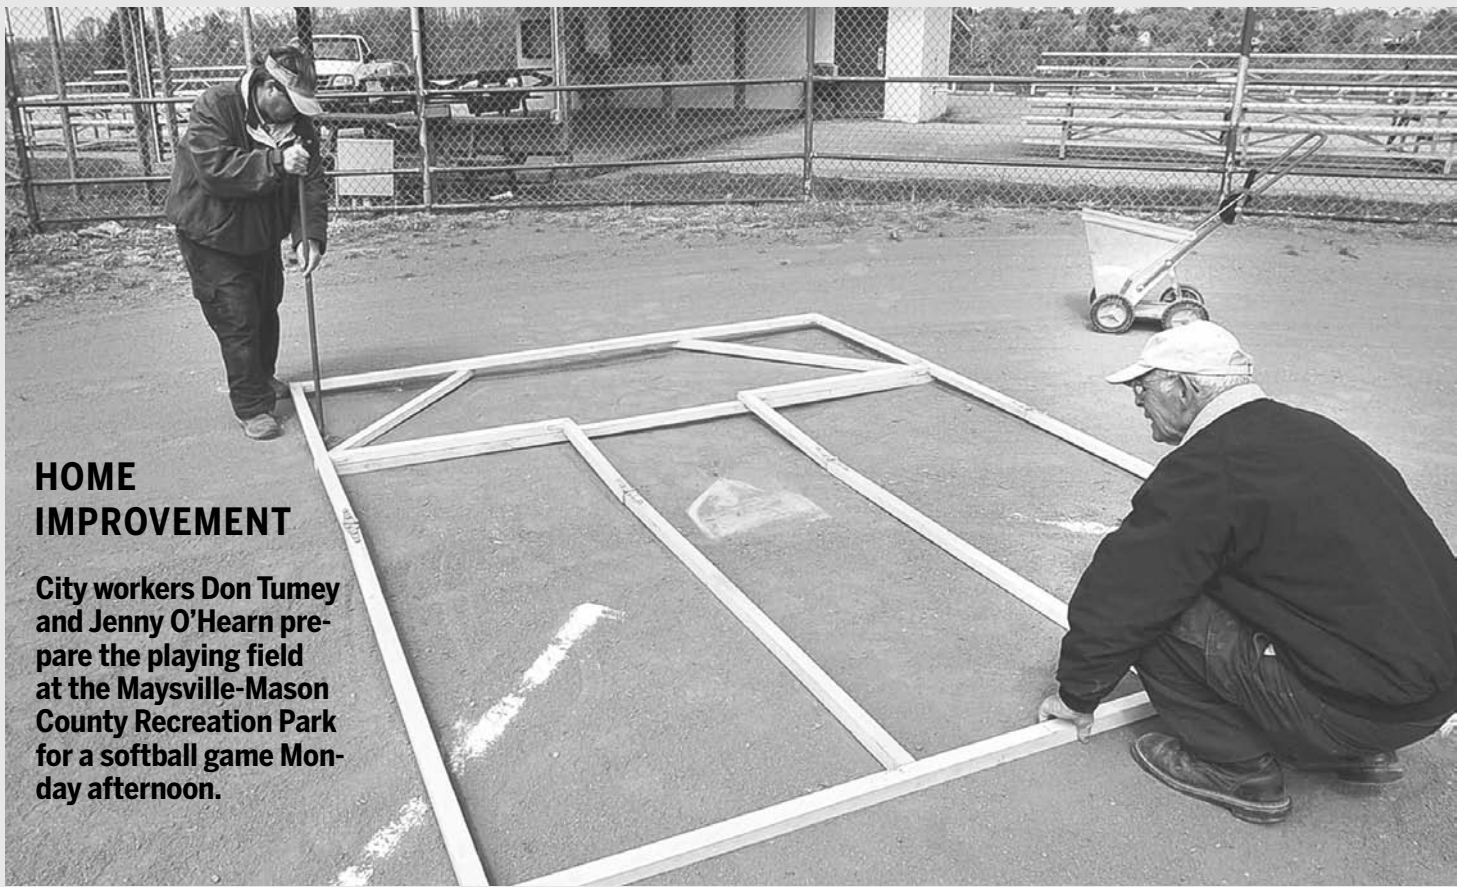

WICKLIFFE | Travelers on the U.S. 51 Ohio River bridge in western Kentucky between Wickliffe, Ky., and Cairo, Ill., may encounter some delays for about a week while several sections of guardrail are repaired and replaced.

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet says traffic will be restricted to one lane on the bridge starting Tuesday. Traffic will move with alternating flow controlled by flaggers from about 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. CDT each weekday.

The bridge carries U.S. 51, US. 60 and U.S. 62 traffic across the Ohio River about 30 miles southwest of Paducah. Approximately 5,500 vehicles use the bridge each day. It connects with the U.S. 60/U.S. 62 Mississippi River bridge to Bird's Point, Mo., at the southern tip of Illinois. — AP

BOWERS CHANGING JOBS NEXT YEAR

wendy.mitchell@lee.net

FLEMINGSBURG | Fleming County High School Principal Rob Bowers is stepping down at the end of the school year, officials confirmed on Tuesday.

No reason was given for the change; the job opening was posted on the school district website on March 19.

"Mr. Bowers is still an employee of the district. He will be in a different position," Tony Roth, Fleming County School superintendent said on Tuesday.

According to the posting, the deadline for applying for the position is April 20, and the job commences with the 2012/2013 school year.

Hired by the school district in July 2010, in December 2010, Bowers was injured while bicycling during the holiday break, visiting his parents in Tupelo, Miss.

He was struck by a Ford F-150 pickup truck in a hit-and-run accident, police said.

Budget negotiators take money from lt. gov.

ROGER ALFORD
Associated Press

FRANKFORT | Lawmakers looking for ways to balance a $19 billion state budget opted to eliminate a $30,000-a-year housing allowance for Lt. Gov. Jerry Abramson.

House Speaker Greg Stumbo said Tuesday he sees no need for the state to continue paying the housing allowance since Abramson commutes from his home in Louisville.

Abramson spokeswoman Kerri Richardson had no immediate comment about the decision, which was first proposed by Senate Republicans and approved by House Democrats.

Stumbo, D-Prestonsburg, said Abramson voiced no opposition.

"I never heard from him, and the governor didn't say anything about it, so I assume they think that's fair," Stumbo said.

Kentucky began paying a housing allowance to lieutenant governors more than a decade ago in a cost-saving move.

Previously, they lived in a state-provided mansion.

April 6 last day to sign up to take farmland out of service

KAREN STEIN
karen.stein@lee.net

GEORGETOWN, Ohio | Across the nation, April 6 is the last day to apply for the Conservation Reserve Program for farmland, according to the Ohio Department of Agriculture.

Many landowners in the Ohio River region could qualify for funds to stop farming at least part of their land temporarily, according to United States Department of Agriculture reports.

The USDA will decide among the farmers who apply who is eligible to put land in a temporary trust.

This is because 6.5 million acres in the CRP program will expire on Sept. 30, making that amount of land up for grabs, Kari Napier, Brown County Farm Service Agency executive director, said.

A typical acre in Brown County can pay $61 to $91 per acre annually, if the land is accepted into the program.

Part of the criteria includes the land must have been farmed four out of six years, from 2002-2007. During those years it could be planted with any type of crop.

Ohio heroin abuse worse, first-time users younger

ANDREW WELSH-HUGGINS
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio | Heroin is so prevalent in Ohio it is “falling out of the sky,” according to new state data that finds children as young as 13 are now starting on the drug, considered a cheap substitute for prescription painkillers.

Regions across the state saw increases in heroin abuse during the past six months, with availability in Cleveland considered at epidemic levels, according to a report released this month by the Ohio Department of Alcohol and Drug Addiction Services.

Participants in the bi-annual survey, including addicts and drug abuse counselors, say the top reason for the increase comes as people addicted to painkillers “realize that heroin is cheaper and easier to obtain,” the report said.

Ohio has struggled with soaring rates of addiction to prescription painkillers, with a record number of fatal overdoses in 2010.

The report also says recent changes to the painkiller Oxycontin meant to reduce its abuse also has turned painkiller addicts to heroin.

“Heroin remains highly available in all regions,” according to the report. “The general sentiment among participants was that heroin is, ‘falling out of the sky.’”

A separate report released this month by the Ohio Department of Health cited 338 heroin-involved deaths in 2010, or one in every five drug overdose deaths in the state.

At The Recovery Center in Lancaster, about 30 miles southeast of Columbus, most of the 360 patients are addicted to painkillers or heroin. Most heroin addicts started with painkillers, said CEO Trisha Saunders.

“They say, ‘I never thought I’d switch from taking a pill to putting a needle in my arm,’” Saunders said Tuesday.

In Toledo, the age of first-time heroin use “reportedly occurs in users as young as 13-14 years,” according to the report.

That corresponds with a “frightening” drop in the age of heroin addicts at Maryhaven in Columbus, one of Ohio’s biggest treatment centers, said president and CEO Paul Coleman. Maryhaven treats 132 patients under age 18, many addicted to painkillers but some also to heroin, Coleman said.

Heroin addictions will go down as the state continues to reduce the availability of prescription painkillers, although much work remains, said Orman Hall, Alcohol and Drug Addiction Services department director.

“Virtually nobody starts out on heroin,” Hall said.

The latest Justice Department report on drug abuse finds heroin availability and abuse increasing as Mexican drug traffickers increase production.

The 2011 National Drug Threat Assessment also finds that some of the new heroin users are prescription drug addicts “switching to heroin because it is cheaper.”

Another government report finds heroin abuse on the rise nationally.

Heroin availability is increasing in Chicago and in nearby Lake County in northern Indiana, according to a 2011 National Drug Intelligence Center report.

In Michigan, heroin trafficking and abuse are now nearly equal to cocaine sales and abuse, according to the center, which also found painkiller addicts switching to heroin.

In central California, treatment providers report abusers of prescription drugs are switching to her-

“Heroin remains highly available in all regions. The general sentiment among participants was that heroin is, ‘falling out of the sky.’”

ACCORDING TO THE REPORT

oin as they increase their tolerance to the painkillers, “and seek a more euphoric high or when the availability of heroin is greater,” according to the NDIC.

In some places, though, the trend is reversed. The Seminole County Sheriff’s Department in Florida reported that the demand for heroin declined as many former abusers turn to prescription painkillers, according to the NDIC. Florida has been home to numerous so-called “pill mills,” which distribute painkillers for cash, often with few questions asked.

BOWERS

FROM A3

Bowers received a broken collarbone, compressed vertebrae, sprained ankle and a concussion in the accident. Bowers was wearing a helmet.

According to reports, the driver of the truck did not stop, leaving Bowers injured on Natchez Trace Parkway near Cliff Gookin Boulevard; his mangled red and black bike landed several yards off the side of the roadway.

A Mississippi man was later identified as the driver, and cited for the incident, police said.

Applicants for Bowers’ job are required to have, or be eligible for, a Kentucky principal certificate.

There are approximately 745 students in the high school.

Salary would be commensurate with experience, officials said.

In related information, according to the agenda for the Fleming County Board of Education, which meets at the Central Office tonight at 6 p.m., there is also a vote scheduled for the renewal of Roth’s contract, officials said.

FARMS

FROM A3

The more productive type of soil, the more the USDA will pay per acre, Napier said.

Also, this money will go back into local economy. The USDA will also pay for 50 percent of the cost to plant the area in one of these conservation approved habitats that will replace crops. Landowners can choose to plant the land with trees, grasses, wildlife habitat, or pol-linator habitat where there is always a flower blooming through most of the year, which is great for bees, she said.

The goal is to put environmentally-sensitive land into a conservation program, as well as offsetting the impact of so much land that is farmed, thus polluting the waterways with nitrogen and phosphorus. In Brown County, the watershed of the Little Miami located in the central region of the county is a conservation priority district.

The CRP program has been active for 25 years, and currently 30 million acres in the U.S. are enrolled in the CRP program, she said.

As a result of the land planted, in 2010 the USDA estimated this offset the effect of 10 million cars on the road.

This is because the plants took in the same amount of carbon that those 10 million cars emitted, according to USDA reports.

The CRP program has restored more than 2 million acres of wetland, and 2 million acres of riparian buffers like trees or grass planted along a waterway to stop erosion pollution into a stream, she said.

The USDA paid $1.8 billion to landowners owning 2.4 million acres as a result of the last enrollment.

This land that was enrolled in the Conservation Reserve Program will expire Sept. 30, 2012, according to USDA reports.

BUDGET

been reached between negotiators for the House and Senate trying to work through disagreements on spending priorities in the bare-bones budget.

Leaders in the Democratic-controlled House and Republican-led Senate said Tuesday they’re optimistic that they’ll reach an agreement on a two-year budget plan in the waning days of the legislative session.

Proposals would cut spending in several ways, including scrapping cost-of-living increases in the monthly pension checks of some 200,000 government retirees, eliminating proposed scholarships for Appalachian college students and skipping pay raises for teachers and government workers.

Negotiators worked until after 8 p.m. on Monday and resumed talks at 10 a.m. Tuesday. They broke at noon and are set to start again at 4 p.m.

Senate Republican Leader Robert Stivers II of Manchester said he’s encouraged by the budget talks so far, and he said negotiators are aiming to finish before 3 a.m. Thursday, the logistical deadline for printing the budget prior to a Friday evening floor vote.

“We’ve moving at a good rate,” Stivers said Tuesday afternoon.

Negotiators allowed cameras from the public television station KET in the conference room where they have been working. Reporters monitored the meeting from the KET feed.

In Kentucky, lawmakers long ago excluded themselves from provisions of the state’s open meeting law.

The tedious negotiations involved discussions of differences between appropriations and spending cuts proposed by House and Senate in a budget strained by economic woes.

Economic indicators show Kentucky slowly rebounding from the recession, but not fast enough to offset the additional budget cuts that lawmakers were wrangling over.

With only four days remaining in this year’s legislative session, negotiators haven’t yet tackled the state’s two-year, $3.5 billion Road Fund budget. Stumbo said he expects a budget deal soon between the House and Senate negotiators.

“It’s like two mules fighting over a turnip,” he said. “There’s not much there to fight over.”

The Senate proposal also cuts the amount of new debt in the budget to $391 million.

That’s $161 million less than the House had authorized and $577 million less than the governor authorized. That remained a point of discussions on Monday.

The budget is House Bill 265.

Early skateboard innovator
Larry Stevenson dies

ANDREW DALTON
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES | Larry Stevenson, a skateboard maker who helped take the sport from an early 1960s kid's gimmick often compared to the hula hoop to a respectable and eventually professional sport on par with surfing, has died.

Stevenson died at age 81 on Sunday at Ronald Reagan-UCLA Medical Center in Santa Monica, his son Curt Stevenson told The Associated Press.

The elder Stevenson had dealt with Parkinson's disease since the early 1970s, and he'd been in a nursing home for much of the past decade. His death was first reported by the Los Angeles Times.

Larry Stevenson was a design innovator who developed features still found on skateboards 50 years later and a businessman who was among the first to make professional and mass-produced boards.

But many skaters say his greatest achievement was getting the public to accept skateboards by permanently linking it to surfing, a sport that had become a national craze and was inspiring movies and music. "That freedom of being in the waves, he wanted to transfer that to land," said Michael Brooke, author of the 1999 history of skateboarding "The Concrete Wave" who often interviewed Stevenson.

"He basically was the godfather of skate culture. Before him, skateboards were toys."

A Southern California native, Stevenson was working as a lifeguard in Venice Beach in 1959 when he saw kids tooling around on mostly homemade boards with clay or metal wheels.

Before he started manufacturing, he became a pioneer in promoting the sport through magazine pictures and stories, an element that would be almost as essential to skate culture as the boards themselves.

He pushed skateboarding in Surf Guide, a magazine he founded with a friend, showing pictures of skaters carving up sidewalks alongside surfers riding waves.

Stevenson then began designing and selling boards with his wife out of their garage.

His first commercially produced board was known as the "Makaha Surf & Ski Skateboard," in an attempt to link the sport to the slopes as well as the waves.

He used the Makaha name, taken from a Hawaiian surf spot, for the company he'd run for the next several decades.

Lady Royals pick up victory

MASON RALLIES FOR FOURTH WIN

CHUCK HAMILTON
chuck.hamilton@lee.net

The Mason County Lady Royals' softball team appears to have learned a few lessons and matured after a rocky season a year ago after holding off Rowan County 9-8 at the Maysville-Mason County Recreation Park on Tuesday evening.

"In the past, we would have a tough time if we got behind or let the other team tie us," said a happy Mason County coach Meredith Fraysure after seeing her squad pull out the win in their final at-bat. "That was not the case today and am really proud of all the girls. They have worked extra hard in the offseason and it's just a very good team win, as well as an important win. Rowan County is always a good hitting team and their coach (Larry Slone) does a great job with their program."

The Lady Vikings finished 28-8 last year and came into the game with a 3-1 record. Rowan got off to a good start, scoring a run in the first but Mason answered with a pair in the bottom of the first, added a single tally in the second, two in the third and three more in the fifth before scoring the winning run in the bottom of the seventh.

Rowan scored four in the third, one in the sixth and tied the game at 8-8 with a pair in the top of the seventh inning before the Lady Royals' game-winner.

Abby Huff led off the Mason seventh with a booming triple over the left fielder's head and Slone elected to issue intentional walks to Cara Irwin and Bethany Foister to load the bases. Leigh Newdigate delivered the winning hit with a line drive single into left field and improving the Lady Royals to 4-3 on the young season.

"We had a lot of successful at-bats today," Fraysure said after Mason banged out 14 hits.

Royals score last six runs to best Indians

ZACK KLEMME
zack.klemme@lee.net

Montgomery County's high-powered offense scored five runs in the first three innings of its Tuesday game at Mason County, but the Royals plated the last six runs to win what coach Tom Posey called their most complete performance this season.

Mason held the Indians scoreless in the final four innings to turn a 5-3 deficit into a 9-5 victory, snapping a three-game losing skid.

Connor Osborne and Aaron Scilley each went 2-for-3 and drove in a run to lead the Royals (2-3) offense. Scilley also earned the win in relief, scattering two hits over the final 4 2-3 innings.

Montgomery (3-3) was led offensively by Sam Lee, who went 2-for-3 and stole four bases, including a first-inning straight steal of home. He was the losing pitcher of record.

The Indians had scored in double digits in three straight games, including a 17-1 dusting of Estill County on Monday. But Scilley and a better-looking Royals defense held Montgomery scoreless in its final four at-bats.

TERRY PRATHER, THE LEDGER INDEPENDENT

Montgomery County's Sam Lee (3) beats the tag of Mason County catcher Kyler Sapp, left, on a straight steal of home in the first inning of the Royals' 9-5 victory Tuesday. The Indians' Dustin Stevens (14) looks on.

Youthful Lady Panthers fall to strong Scott County club

chuck.hamilton@lee.net

FLEMINGSBURG | The Fleming County Lady Panthers are having a few growing pains in the early going of the 2012 softball season and meeting one of the top 10 teams in the state on Monday evening was a tall task.

Scott County, which went 26-5 last year, came in ranked ninth in the most recent softball coaches poll, according to Fleming coach Nathan Ryver, and the Lady Cardinals showed exactly why with a 15-0 win in five innings against the young Lady Panthers.

"We knew coming into the season that we were going to take some lumps here and there," said Ryver. "But we wanted our girls to see what a very good softball team looks like and they didn't disappoint. Even watching them in pregame warm-ups, you could tell by how precise they were what kind of a team they have."

Scott County sent 13 batters to the plate in the first inning, scoring nine times while banging out seven hits against freshman Kayla Biddle.

MONDAY: BRACKEN 5, LEWIS 3

Polar Bears jump out on Lions early, hold on

'THEY JUST CAME OUT AND
SMACKED US IN THE MOUTH'

ZACK KLEMME
zack.klemme@lee.net

VANCEBURG | Bracken County's offensive strategy Monday against Lewis County wasn't complicated: the Polar Bears focused on putting the ball in play and capitalizing on what the Lions gave them early.

That worked long enough for Bracken to get a lead, and Polar Bears senior hurler Josh Cummins made it stand up.

Visiting Bracken, aided by early Lewis sloppiness, scored the first five runs on its way to a 5-3 victory.

Cummins delivered a complete-game performance to earn his second win of the season. He struck out 11 Lions and allowed eight hits and three walks on 119 pitches. Cummins and Eli Florer each went 2-for-4 for the Polar Bears (3-1).

Lewis' Nick Thompson pitched the final five innings in relief of starter Kyle Ruggles. He allowed one run and notched six strikeouts, throwing 94 pitches and twice stranding the bases loaded.

Thompson went 2-for-3 and Sammy Holder and Connor Owens each were 2-for-4 for the Lions (3-2).

Bracken stranded 11 runners and Lewis left 10.

The Polar Bears took note of the Lions' defeat of Ashland Blazer last week and used this game as an early-season measuring stick.

"I know we didn't see what maybe Ashland saw (in Lewis' pitching and lineup), but any time a team can come out and beat a team that's top-20 in the state, and we can come out and beat 'em, that's a great win for us," Bracken coach Larry "Scooter" Charles said. "I hope the kids take it and run with it."

Lewis didn't match Bracken's initial intensity, and it cost the Lions in the early innings.

"They were ready to play and we weren't," Lewis coach Keith Prater said. "They just came out and smacked us in the mouth, and we weren't able to recover tonight."

The Polar Bears racked up five runs in their first three at-bats, capitalizing on two Lewis errors, two walks, a hit batter, two passed balls and a wild pitch.

Florer singled to left with two out in the first, moved up on an error and a passed ball, and scored from third on another passed ball.

Lady Royals blank Lady Saints

BRAD LAUX
For The Ledger Independent

Clay Boone has big expectations for his Mason County girls' tennis team, but the Lady Royals have battled early-season injuries and illnesses that have slowed their progress to date.

Enter St. Patrick. First-year coach Brian Tucker's club is rebuilding and the Lady Saints provided just the antidote Mason County needed to get the now mostly healthy Lady Royals ready for the season ahead by claiming a 7-0 win on Tuesday at the Maysville-Mason County Recreation Park.

"They are starting to make the progress they need to make now. We had some injuries and illnesses early in the season, so we are not where we should be at this point," Boone said. "We are executing well at this time. Our younger kids are stepping up, working the point well and closing out matches, while our more experienced players are getting back into match form."

Like Mason County, St. Patrick has been short-handed throughout the early portion of its season, a trend that continued on Tuesday.

"We only had four of our top five here today. It is a rebuilding year for our girls and they are improving, but

See TENNIS, A8

BRAD LAUX, FOR THE LEDGER INDEPENDENT
Mason County senior Jessica Shotwell returns a backhand winner in the Lady Royals' 7-0 victory over St. Patrick on Tuesday. In just her second match since returning from an injury, Shotwell cruised to an 8-0 victory at No. 2 singles and teamed with Tessa Gray to win 8-1 at No. 1 doubles.

BRACKEN

FROM A7

In the second, Bracken's Eyan Duncan was hit by a pitch and scored on what was ruled an error on Connor Rigg's fly ball. Phillip Jefferson, who had walked, scored on Cummins' groundout.

And one frame later, Zach Williams led off with a single and came home on the throw on Jacob Houston's groundout. Duncan at first and Jarrett Moore executed a double steal with two outs, with Duncan drawing the throw and Moore beating the relay home for a 5-0 Bracken lead.

The Polar Bears simply made Lewis make plays and took advantage when the Lions didn't.

"Not only did we put it in play, but we put some balls in play with authority," Charles said. "... If you put it in play, good things will happen."

Lewis got on the board in the fourth as Kasey Riley's long single plated Thompson, who had doubled.

And in the fifth, eight

Lions batted as Lewis cut its deficit to 5-3. Corey Davis scored on Riley's high popup on the infield, and Owens scored on a Bracken error.

The Lions got the tying runs on base in the seventh inning on Thompson's single and a Bracken error. But Cummins struck out pinch hitter Wade Adams, his 11th punchout, to end it.

"We told Josh early, when we had the five-run lead, to come out and throw strikes and put it in play and see what happens, and he did that," Charles said. "And thank goodness the errors didn't come back to haunt us today like they have sometimes in the past."

Lewis played better in the latter stages but just couldn't overcome the five-run head start it gave Bracken.

"We're battling some confidence issues," Prater said. "We gotta get kids to overcome those things, and that's a process that's gonna take all year and we understand that, but we love our guys and they'll come ready to play tomorrow."

Bracken is at Villa Madonna on Thursday and hosts 39th District foe Mason County the next day.

"What we want to get out of this week is keep this momentum, beat Villa, take care of them and then go into Friday with some big momentum," Charles said.

The Lions bounced back with a 9-6 defeat of Bath County on Tuesday. Cory Christy got the win and drove in three runs. Lewis also honored the late Gary Ishmael, who had signed on as an assistant in Prater's first year but died during the offseason.

"I hope that's a little bit of a humbling experience for our guys as well," Prater said. "You get the opportunity to play, man, go out and give it all, because tomorrow may not be here."

MASON

FROM A7

"We weren't over-anxious at the plate and we advanced baserunners and did a good job running the bases. It's really good to see us succeed as a group."

After Rowan's run in the first, which was plated on a single to left from McKenzie Summers, the Lady Royals responded quickly. Amy Arthur led off the first against sophomore Morgan Mitchell with an infield hit. She advanced to third base on Irwin's deep drive double to left field and scored on a fielder's choice ground ball off the bat of Bethany Foister, who reached on a throwing error. Irwin scored on a single to center by Karissa Greenhill, who was also the winning pitcher after scattering nine hits in a route-going performance.

The Mason defense went awry in the third inning when they committed all four of their errors in the contest, leading to three Rowan runs. The lone Lady Viking hits in the frame were a double to left-center from Becca Huff, who scored on a base hit to right from Brooke Ratliff. The other runs in the frame came as a result of a sacrifice bunt and a pair of errors.

The Lady Royals erupted for three runs in the fifth inning to take an 8-5 lead. Mason loaded the bases with three consecutive singles, an infield hit by Caitlin Ross, a blooper down the left field line by Arthur and an infield hit from Huff. Irwin lined a sharp single to left field to plate Ross and Arthur and Huff scored on a forceout at second base. Irwin and Arthur led the Lady Royals' hit parade with three apiece. But Rowan wasn't done yet either.

The Lady Vikings' sixth inning run scored on a bases loaded walk to Tessa Jennings, plating Colleen Helvey, who began the frame with a line-drive single to left. Helvey also came through in the Rowan seventh when she drove in Summers and Lindsey Wilson to tie the game. Helvey advanced to second and moved to third on a sacrifice bunt but Greenhill left her stranded after retiring leadoff hitter Jade Turner on a pop-up to third baseman Jessica Hay to end the inning, setting up the dramatic game-winning rally.

"Karissa pitched a very good game against a good team and except for that one bad inning, we did a good job playing behind her," said Fraysure. "Katie Hamm did a tremendous job behind the plate and we certainly feel this is the kind of game that we can build on and have some momentum going into Saturday, when we will play Lewis County and Newport Central Catholic in a round-robin here."

TENNIS

the one girl we were missing is a junior and the rest of our team is sophomores and eighth-graders," Lady Saint coach Brian Tucker said. "Today they showed good technique and solid strokes, but we still have a lot more room for improvement, which should come with practice."

Mason County's Madison Ward and Jessica Shotwell had no problems capturing their matches at Nos. 1 and 2 singles. Ward defeated Elizabeth Heller 8-1, while Shotwell, playing for just the second time this season, won 8-0 over Lauren Heller.

"Jessica Shotwell hit her forehand well and closed out well, and Madison Ward did too," Boone said. "They moved the ball within the court and that's what good players do. They were keeping the ball in play, moving well and worked the point well today."

Monica Shotwell outlasted Caitlyn Tucker 9-7 at No. 3 singles, while Laura Poe defeated Charlee Schaefer at No. 4 singles 8-3.

The day's closest competition came at No. 5 singles, in which Danielle Cottam slipped past Elizabeth Heller in a tiebreaker 7-6 (7-2). Heller, who played three total matches on the day, had to fill in for the shorthanded Lady Saints, which only had four athletes on hand for the competition.

In doubles, Jessica Shotwell and Tessa Gray earned an 8-1 victory over Tucker and Schaefer at No. 1, while Poe and Cottam held off the Heller twins at No. 2, 7-5.

Mason County has a tough schedule ahead and Boone was glad his team had the chance to gain another match under its belt while it returns to full strength.

"Having the opportunity to get everyone healthy and having our young players play (today) gives everyone confidence," he said. "They executed well and battled in every point. We just had more experience and aptitude for the game (than the Lady Saints), but give St. Patrick credit, they're better now than where they were."

Mason County (2-3) returns to the court on Thursday to host Bourbon County at 5 p.m. St. Patrick (1-1) is off until it travels to face Harrison County next Wednesday at 4:30 p.m.

Big boys only in the Big Easy

POWER PLAYERS FROM POWER CONFERENCES IN FINAL FOUR

JOHN MARSHALL
Associated Press

It's going to be big boys only in the Big Easy.

After a couple years of mid-majors breaking into the party and little guys leading their teams to titles, the Final Four will feature power players from power conferences.

The players are as good as it gets when it comes to big men: Kansas' Thomas Robinson, Ohio State's Jared Sullinger and Kentucky's Anthony Davis. They're all first-team All-Americans, and Louisville's Gorgui Dieng isn't bad, either.

The teams, traditionally strong: Kentucky, Kansas, Louisville, Ohio State. Every one of them has won a national title, been to at 10 or more Final Fours — all at least once in the past seven years — and have coaches who have won titles or coached in the title game.

Did we mention Louisville and Kentucky are playing each other?

Yeah, this is going to be big.

THE STARS

You know college basketball, you know these guys. We're going to tell you about them anyway.

Robinson, Kansas. Big, strong, athletic, a double-double waiting to happen. Hard to believe this unanimous All-American wasn't much more than a bit player last season.

Davis, Kentucky. The 6-foot-10 forward has had as much an impact as any of coach John Calipari's recent run of freshmen phenoms. Athletic and with a pterodactyl-like wingspan, he scores, he swats, he disrupts.

Sullinger, Ohio State. The AP's first repeat All-American in three years, Sullinger is the prototype of today's big man: Big and physical, yet with good touch away from the basket and agile enough to get to the rim. Didn't play when Kansas beat the Buckeyes on Dec. 10 because of a sore back.

Peyton Siva, Louisville. The point guard can take over games with his scoring, but it's his ability to get everyone involved that makes him so dangerous. Quick enough to get around a lightning bolt, he'll keep probing the defense until he finds the best shot for himself or a teammate.

THE SIDEKICKS

Not the stars, but not far behind.

Tyshawn Taylor, Kansas. Ty is the guy when it comes to running Kansas' offense.

Dashaun Thomas, Ohio State. Sullinger gets all the attention, but Thomas has been the Buckeyes' leading scorer in the postseason, averaging 21.8 points per game.

Kyle Kuric, Louisville. The Cardinals' leading scorer barely needs to touch the ball to get a shot off.

Terrence Jones, Kentucky. The Wildcats have an NBA team in the making, so it was hard to pick just one player. We went with Jones, the super sophomore with the multidimensional skills who creates so many matchup problems.

THE COACHES

Rick Pitino, Louisville. The first coach to take three different schools to the Final Four, he's put together one of the best coach-'em-up jobs of his career this season, leading a team that had some big stumbles during the season into his sixth trip to the Final Four.

Calipari, Kentucky. Became the second coach to take three teams to the Final Four when he got the Wildcats to Houston last season. Only thing missing for this master recruiter is a title.

Thad Matta, Ohio State. Has the Buckeyes in the Final Four for the second time in six years after reaching the title game with Greg Oden in 2007. Kicking the team out of practice after a rough stretch in February, which prompted a team meeting, helped kick-start OSU's run to New Orleans.

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Kentucky's Anthony Davis (23), recently named an Associated Press first-team All-American, works against Baylor's Quincy Miller, left, during the first half of the Wildcats' victory on Sunday in Atlanta.

Bill Self, Kansas. Solidified his reputation by winning 2008 national title with Jayhawks, led a team that was supposed to be rebuilding to the Final Four this season.

SUBTLETIES

The natural inclination is to follow the ball. After all, whoever scores the most wins. But there are countless subtle things that lead to the ball going in the basket or, in the case of the defense, not going in.

Here's a few to watch this weekend:
Dieng's anticipation.

It's one thing to see Louisville's Senegalese shot blocker swoop in at the last minute and swat a shot away, but watch before the shot goes up, the way he sets himself up and figures out when to jump. And that coil — he's like a cobra waiting to strike.

Sullinger's footwork. Satch Sullinger, Jared's father and high school coach, had the Ohio State forward working on his footwork from an early age and now he's like Chris Brown dancing around the basket. Pay particular attention to the way he uses his pivot foot to face up to the basket.

Taylor's first step. The Kansas point guard can blow past pretty much anyone. That quick first step is what does it; watch how quickly he gets it even or past the defender's leg to shoot by him.

Aaron Craft's off-the-ball defense. The Ohio State point guard has tap-dancer-quick feet and is like a second jersey while following an opposing guard. If he doesn't want his man to get the ball, he's probably not going to get it.

FLEMING

FROM A7

Biddle was also the victim of a pair of errors in the opening frame and Ryver said she, like many of her teammates, is seeing her first varsity action.

"Kayla really pitched fairly well but when you make errors and give a good team extra chances, it's just something we can't have," said the coach. "We have three really young pitchers who are just now learning how to pitch. When Kayla's curveball was on, she got them to pop it up but we have to make the plays behind her and if not for the errors, it could've been a lot different."

The Lady Cardinals' big hits in the first included a two-run single to left-center field from junior catcher Kelsey Crowe, a run-scoring base hit to left from sophomore Katie Stamper and two-run singles to left from both junior Michael Luckett and sophomore pitcher Marlee Tevis.

Scott County tacked on a pair of runs in the third and added four in the fifth while Tevis and junior Tiffany Wickline limited the Lady Panthers to seven hits. Tevis gave up a pair of singles and fanned five during her two-inning stint in the pitcher's circle. Wickline then scattered five hits with three strikeouts.

After Biddle threw a scoreless second inning, ending the frame with a 1-4 double play on a soft liner back to her, Scott County scored two in the third on just one hit. Miranda Holcombe began the inning with a walk, advanced to second on a base on balls to Jordan Franchino, went to third on an error and scored on a sacrifice fly to right field from Harper Ford. Franchino was plated on a single to right by Ashley Reed.

Reed smacked a three-run home run over the center field fence in the fifth inning, scoring Franchino and courtesy runner Shelby Sumeral. The 15th run was scored by Abby Lowery after she reached via a base on balls. Lowery was plated on an infield single from Amanda Atkins after moving to third on a single from Courtney Hall.

The Lady Panthers had several opportunities to dent the plate but stranded seven baserunners.

Sophomore shortstop Kira Brown and senior third baseman Mandy Boyd opened the Fleming first inning with back-to-back singles but Tevis retired the next three hitters on strikes.

Fleming also left two runners on base in the fourth after junior Celena Wagoner and freshman Morgan Stephens singles with two out. In the seventh, Brown and Boyd were again stranded after a line single to center from Brown and a bunt base hit by Boyd with one away. Boyd also double in the third inning to finish 3-for-3 at the plate.

"We have been struggling to score runs," said Ryver. "We put the bat on the ball often tonight but several were right at somebody and we're not getting our bunts down, which is a huge chunk of what we like to do offensively. We're going to Florida to play a lot of games in three days and we think that will really help us. When we went two years ago, we showed the biggest improvement and we're looking forward to having that happen again. We'll play a lot and get tired but that will show us who really wants to play. It'll be kind of a gut check."

Huskies beat Wildcats to reach fifth straight Final Four

DOUG FEINBERG
Associated Press

KINGSTON, R.I. | Tiffany Hayes scored 22 points and top-seeded Connecticut beat Kentucky 80-65 on Tuesday night to advance to the Final Four for the fifth straight season. Kaleena Mosqueda-Lewis added 18 for UConn (33-4), which will play the winner of Notre Dame and Maryland on Sunday in Denver. The Huskies matched their own school mark of five straight trips to the national semifinals. LSU and Stanford have also accomplished the feat. Unlike their previous four trips to the regional finals, which were quick blowouts, the Huskies had to work hard to pull away from the Wildcats. UConn led 48-47 early in the second half before turning up its defense. The Huskies used a 21-4 spurt to take command. Hayes, the lone senior on the team, was the catalyst, scoring seven points during the run. She got it started with a lay-in. Then the Huskies started a parade to the free throw line, with whistle after whistle. The Huskies converted 12 free throws during the game-changing run. Hayes was selected most outstanding player of the regional. While the Huskies were scoring points, their vaunted defense was stymieing the Wildcats. Kentucky torched UConn for 39 points, the most allowed in a first half this season by the Huskies.

Kentucky guard A'dia Mathies (1) and Connecticut guard Kelly Faris, right, battle for possession of the ball during the first half of UConn's victory in Kingston, R.I., on Tuesday.

The Wildcats found it much tougher to score in the second half. During UConn's burst, Kentucky could only get two field goals over a span of 9 minutes.

Mosqueda-Lewis'

3-pointer with 7:26 left capped UConn's burst and made it 69-52. Kentucky (28-7) could get no closer than 15 the rest of the way.

Samarie Walker scored

14 to lead the Wildcats.

The Kentucky women were trying to join their men's team in the Final Four. It would have been the eighth time that a school had both programs in the national semifinals. Connecticut has done it three times including last season. The Huskies are still the only school to win both the men's and women's championship in the same season accomplishing the feat in 2004. It's the second time in three seasons that the Wildcats had reached the regional finals. They lost to Oklahoma two seasons ago. Still Kentucky is headed in the right direction. The Wildcats won their first regular season SEC championship since 1982 and tied the school record for victories in a season. Coach Matthew Mitchell will have most of his team back for next season. The Wildcats' coach before the year started put the Denver Final Four logo in front of the locker room as motivation for his squad. Now they can look toward next season and making it to New Orleans. It's been a strange season for UConn. Coming into the year, coach Geno Auriemma didn't think this team could make a run at the Final Four or an eighth national championship. With the loss of Maya Moore to graduation, the Huskies had a lot of questions about themselves. Now the Huskies are back in the Final Four for the 13th time in the last 18 years.

ROYALS

"We hit the ball, we fielded, we're throwing strikes," Posey said. "... The guys played a whole lot better today. I hope that they're starting to believe in themselves, and that's where it starts." Mason was coming off a 3-2 loss at Bourbon County on Monday, in which Posey complimented Trevor Taylor's pitching performance, but the Royals let a 2-0 lead slip away. The nine runs is Mason's most this season, and the Indians' five is only the second time they've scored less than eight this year. "That's a good team over there that has a lot back from last year, I believe, and it's always good to win a 10th Region game, and especially at home," Posey said. Trailing 5-3, the Royals took the lead for good in the bottom of the third. Osborne was hit by a pitch leading off, stole second and swiped home while Montgomery was distracted trying to get Nathan Cracraft out in a rundown after he was picked off first base. Cracraft then scored from third on an Indians error on Bryce Gardner's grounder, and Scille's single to right plated Daulton Mason for a 6-5 edge. Mason tacked on three more in the fifth frame. Lukas Greenhill scored on a pair of errors in the fifth inning when Montgomery tried to pick him off second base, and Logan Brown's groundout scored Scille, who had singled. Osborne doubled to left-center to score Derek Moore for a four-run edge. That late stretch helped make up for a wild first two and a half innings in which the Royals' defense was a little loose and Montgomery took advantage. Lee was hit by a pitch with two outs in the first, and after an error and a walk loaded the bases, Lee stole home to open the scoring, and in the next frame, Blake Thomas' sacrifice fly plated Ben Gulley. Mason took its first lead in the second. Greenhill's sac fly scored Cracraft, and Mason and Gardner scored on an Indians error. Montgomery countered with three runs in the third. Jordan Nester singled home Lee, courtesy runner Ryan Prater scored as Scille's first pitch got away, and Dustin Stevens came home on a Royals error. That would be the Indians' last run. "We just didn't really show up and we weren't ready to play. That pretty much sums it up," Montgomery coach Gene Combs said. "I don't know what else I can say, and again, I don't mean to take anything away from (Mason) at all 'cause they did what they had to do to win, and that's baseball." Mason travels to Bryan Station on Thursday.

Eye to Eye

with David Blandford, M.D.

NOW FOR THE GOOD NEWS!

The recommendation that people with diabetes schedule regular visits to the ophthalmologist and do their best to control blood sugar levels seems to be paying off. According to the most recent report, diabetes-related vision complications have declined significantly over the past 15 years. This is rather significant news in light of the fact that, while the number of adults with diabetes has risen, the proportion of adults with diabetes who reported vision impairment has decreased. The improvement can be attributed to better control of diabetes risk factors (such as blood glucose and blood pressure) and improved detection and treatment of diabetes-related eye problems (including glaucoma, cataracts, and retinopathy). It is heartening to see that education is paying off.

New medications and treatment strategies for the care and management of diabetic patients have decreased the complications of diabetes. As a result, kidney problems, vascular disease, neuropathy and diabetic retinopathy have been reduced. At KENTUCKY EYE INSTITUTE, we look forward to helping you understand your needs and providing information so you may make an informed decision regarding vision correction. We're located at 1937 Old Main St., Suite 1, Old Washington, where our courteous staff is professional and well trained. Syria accepts peace plan but clashes continue

ACCEPTS UN ENVOY’S PLAN BUT INCURSIONS REPORTED ALONG BORDER WITH LEBANON

BASSEM MROUE
Associated Press

QAA, Lebanon | Syria accepted a cease-fire drawn up by U.N. envoy Kofi Annan on Tuesday, but the diplomatic breakthrough was swiftly overshadowed by intense clashes between government soldiers and rebels that sent bullets flying into Lebanon.

Opposition members accuse President Bashar Assad of agreeing to the plan to stall for time as his troops make a renewed push to kill off bastions of dissent. And the conflict just keeps getting deadlier: The U.N. said the death toll has grown to more than 9,000, a sobering assessment of a devastating year-old crackdown on the uprising that shows no sign of ending.

Annan’s announcement that Syria had accepted his peace plan was met with deep skepticism.

“We are not sure if it’s political maneuvering or a sincere act,” said Louay Safi, a member of the opposition Syrian National Council. “We have no trust in the current regime. ... We have to see that they have stopped killing civilians.”

Annan’s plan calls for an immediate, two-hour halt in fighting every day to allow humanitarian access and medical evacuations. The plan also outlines a complete cease-fire, but that will take more time because Syria must first move troops and equipment out of cities and towns, government forces and the divided opposition must stop fighting, and a U.N.-supervised monitoring mission must be established.

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said Assad must now act.

“Given Assad’s history of overpromising and under-delivering, that commitment must now be matched by immediate action,” Clinton told reporters in Washington. “We will judge Assad’s sincerity and seriousness by what he does, not by what he says. If he is ready to bring this dark chapter in Syria’s history to a close, he could prove it by immediately ordering regime forces to stop firing and begin withdrawing from populated areas.”

British Foreign Secretary William Hague said Assad’s decision was only a first step.

“We will continue to judge the Syrian regime by its practical actions, not by its often empty words,” he said.

Annan, who is an envoy for the U.N. and the Arab League, has traveled to Russia and China to shore up support for his peace plan. Russia and China have twice shielded Assad from U.N. sanctions over his crackdown, saying the statements were unbalanced and blamed only the government. Syria is Moscow’s last remaining ally in the Middle East and is a major customer for Russia’s arms industry, but the Kremlin has recently shown impatience with Assad.

In Beijing on Tuesday, Annan said China has offered its “full support” for his mission.

In contrast, Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad offered Assad unequivocal support.

“I’m very happy that Syrian authorities are managing the situation with confidence,” the official Iranian news agency quoted Ahmadinejad as saying. He echoed Assad’s charge that rebels are acting out a Western conspiracy. “Americans want to dominate Syria, Lebanon, Iran and all other countries through the false slogan of defending the freedom of the (Syrian) people, and we must be alert toward their conspiracy,” he said. Iran is one of Syria’s last true allies.

Despite the high-level diplomacy, the situation on the ground remained as bloody as ever.

There were conflicting reports about whether Syrian troops physically crossed the border into Lebanon during heavy fighting near a rural area around the Lebanese village of Qaa.

Two Lebanese security officials told The Associated Press that only bullets whizzed across the frontier.

“There is no Syrian military presence on the Lebanese side of the border,” a military official said, echoing an official denial on the state-run National News Agency, which also said there was no incursion.

But two witnesses in Qaa said they saw dozens of troops enter Lebanon, apparently chasing Syrian rebels. One witness said the Syrian troops burned several homes. Another man showed an AP reporter several high-caliber bullets that he said struck his home.

The witnesses asked not to be identified because of the sensitivity of the matter. An AP reporter at the scene could not verify that any houses were burned, however, as Lebanese soldiers had cordoned off the area. The border in the area is poorly demarcated, and residents cross into each country easily and frequently.

Crackles of gunfire from Syria were clearly heard, even hours after the fire-fights.

Any movement into Lebanese territory would escalate a conflict that already is spiraling toward civil war. There are concerns the violence could cause a broader conflagration by sucking in neighboring countries.

The Syrian uprising began in March 2011 with mostly peaceful protests as part of the Arab Spring. It turned increasingly militarized after the government unleashed tanks, snipers and troops with machine guns to break up protests — a development that many opposition members say forced them to take up arms. The government denies there is a popular uprising, saying the revolt is being driven by armed groups and others it calls terrorists.

On Tuesday, Assad visited the third-largest city of Homs and its battered neighborhood of Baba Amr, a former opposition stronghold that has become a symbol of the uprising, in what appeared to be a show of his control over even the most rebellious areas.

A monthlong siege by the government to drive rebel fighters out of Baba Amr killed hundreds of people — many of them civilians. Assad’s forces overran the rebel-held district on March 1.

Tighter security for SAT, ACT in wake of cheating

STUDENTS MUST SUBMIT PHOTOS

FRANK ELTMAN
Associated Press

MINEOLA, N.Y. | The millions of students who take the SAT or ACT each year will have to submit photos of themselves when they sign up for the college entrance exams, under a host of new security measures announced Tuesday in the aftermath of a major cheating scandal on Long Island.

The two companies that administer the tests, the College Board and ACT Inc., agreed to the precautions under public pressure brought to bear by Nassau County District Attorney Kathleen Rice, who is overseeing the investigation. The measures take effect in the fall.

“I believe these reforms, and many others which are happening behind the scenes, will prevent the kind of cheating that our investigation uncovered and give high schools and colleges the tools they need to identify those who try to cheat,” Rice said.

Rice has charged 20 current or former students from a cluster of well-to-do, high-achieving suburbs on Long Island with participating in a scheme in which teenagers hired other people for as much as $3,500 each to take the exam for them. The five alleged ringers arrested in the case were accused of flashing phony IDs when they showed up for the tests. All 20 have pleaded not guilty.

In one instance, a young man allegedly produced ID and took the test for a teenage girl who had a name that could have been either male or female.

Students have long been required to show identification when they arrive for one of the tests. Under the new rules, they will have to submit head shots of themselves in advance with their test application. A copy of the photo will be printed on the admission ticket mailed to each student, and will also appear on the test site roster.

School administrators are “going to be able to compare the photo and the person who showed up and say that’s either John Doe or that’s not John Doe. They didn’t have the ability to do that before,” the district attorney said.

The photo will also be attached to the student’s scores, which, for the first time, will be sent to his or her high school, so that administrators and guidance counselors can see the pictures. Previously, test results were sent only to the student.

“Millions of college-bound students who take the SAT and ACT each year can have a new confidence that their hard work and preparation will be rewarded and not diminished by cheaters,” Rice said.

Officials from the College Board and ACT Inc. said that any additional costs would be absorbed and not passed on to students. The College Board charges $49 for the SAT; ACT Inc. charges $34 for the basic test, $49.50 if it includes a writing exam.

“We believe these measures support both test integrity and access and equity for all students,” said Kathryn Juric, vice president of the SAT program for the College Board.

During the 2010-11 school year nearly 3 million students worldwide took the SAT; 1.6 million students took the ACT in 2011.

In another key change, students will be required to identify on their application the high school they attend. In the Long Island scandal, the impostors often went to high schools in neighboring communities so they would not be recognized.

Bob Schaeffer, public education director of FairTest: National Center for Fair

& Open Testing, a longtime critic of the SAT, said the new procedures would still not prevent cheating if a student submitted an impostor’s photograph.

“The image on the registration form will match up with that of the person taking the exam so long as an equally phony ID is used at the test site,” he said.

But Rice argued that the follow-up report to the student’s high school, with the photograph, should deter most cheating.

“Knowing that’s going to be going back to their high schools, specifically their guidance counselor, that’s the backup check that’s going to prevent it from happening,” Rice said. She also said the photos would be kept in a database should any questions of cheating arise later.

In addition, administrators will check student IDs more frequently at test centers.

IDs will be examined when students enter a test site, whenever they re-enter the test room after breaks, and again when the answer sheets are collected.

HEALTH

FROM A1

The law, pushed to passage by Obama and congressional Democrats two years ago, would affect nearly all Americans and extend insurance coverage to 30 million people who now lack it. Republicans are strongly opposed, including the presidential contenders now campaigning for the chance to challenge Obama in November.

The court focused on whether the mandate for Americans to have insurance “is a step beyond what our cases allow,” in the words of Justice Anthony Kennedy.

But Kennedy, who is often the swing vote on cases that divide the justices along ideological lines, also said he recognized the magnitude of the nation’s health care problems and seemed to suggest they would require a comprehensive solution.

He and Chief Justice John Roberts emerged as the apparent pivotal votes in the court’s decision. The ruling is due in June in the midst of a presidential election campaign that has focused in part on the new law.

Wednesday’s final arguments — the third day in the unusually long series of hearings — will focus on whether the rest of the law can remain even if the insurance mandate is struck down and, separately, on the constitutionality of another provision expanding the federal-state Medicaid program.

The insurance requirement is intended to complement two unchallenged provisions of the law that require insurers to cover people regardless of existing medical conditions and limit how much they can charge in premiums based on a person’s age or health.

Remember the ceiling when redecorating

AN OFTEN-FORGOTTEN WAY TO REDESIGN

SARAH WOLFE
Associated Press

Ceilings are the Rodney Dangerfield of homes. They get no respect.

But there are plenty of easy ways to make over this oft-overlooked area, from the quirky charm of Victorian-era, pressed-tin tiles and beadboard to a simple splash of color.

"Historically, ceilings were highly decorated, but it seems as houses have become more modern they have been forgotten," says San Francisco-based interior designer Cecilie Starlin. "Once again, though, ceilings are starting to get the attention they deserve."

Here are some suggestions — from the simple to the complex — to transform your ceilings from drab white squares into the focal point of a room.

CEILING MEDALLION

Probably the easiest way to bring the eye upward in a room is with a ceiling medallion, a white or colored decorative disk typically mounted around a lighting fixture.

The pieces come in a variety of styles and can be found in any home improvement store. Another bonus? Today's lighter polyurethane models are much simpler to install and easier on the wallet than those from decades past, says Alex Bandon, online editor of Thisoldhouse.com.

HOUSEWORKS

Gettin' back to the city

Back in the dim, dark past — it was the 1970s, actually — I was involved in the back-to-the-land movement.

I sat up into the wee hours with other like-minded folks talking about finding a piece of land (in Vermont, or Missouri, or Oregon — I forget why), raising our own food, making our own clothes, building our own houses and pretty much escaping the urban rat-race and the energy crisis. OMG, gasoline was almost $1 a gallon!

STEVE BATIE

It was, I repeat, some years ago.

Also, there might have been more than a little cheap white wine involved.

But it's a memory and dream I cherish to this day.

The problem was I never really wanted to leave town. There was too much I liked about urban life — bars, movies, all-night grocery stores, art galleries, PEOPLE — to want to trade that for outhouses and vegetable canning.

What I wanted, I figured out eventually, was a sort of back-to-the-city movement. Why, I wondered, did these dreams always have to involve buying a hunk of wilderness out in the boonies? Why not do it in town?

I bring this up because I recently read "Urban Homesteading," by Rachel Kaplan and K. Ruby Blume.

I think they must have been reading my mind.

The book includes a lot of political carping about the sad state of the world, climate instability, soaring energy prices, and waste, waste, waste. It gets a little thick at times (you may want to wear boots), but once you wade through that, there are a lot of good ideas here.

You've all heard the advice: "Think globally, buy locally."

For Kaplan and Blume, "local" means the neighborhood, the street, the very house you live in. Start small, they say, but start.

There's only so much a single person — or even a like-minded group — can do by grocery shopping at the farmers market and patronizing the corner hardware store, but even that is something. It all adds up.

To that end, the book is filled with ideas for city folks to grow, preserve and store fruits and veggies; raise small livestock (poultry, rabbits, goats, even bees); build or remodel their own homes; reduce water use and start reclaiming their lives from corporate kingpins.

There are tidbits on solar and wind power, as well as composting toilets and graywater systems.

But make no mistake: This is not a manual.

There are far more complete books on vegetable gardening and treating bodily ills with herbs.

Or on raising bunnies and chickens, as far as that goes. And if I wanted to make cob (soil-based plaster) or adobe bricks, there's only enough information offered to get me into trouble.

But the ideas are here.

The book also includes many, many first-hand accounts by and about people who already are living the back-to-the-city life.

In fact, my only real quibble is that "Urban Homesteading" is very California-centric — to be expected, I suppose, because that's where the authors live. All those successful pioneers seem to be puttin' it to the man in Berkeley and Oakland.

It would have been nice if they'd found a few urban homesteaders in Colorado or Georgia. Or Nebraska.

I assure you, we're here.

CHAMBER NOTES

Defining the Chamber of Commerce; outlining its goals and mission

What is a Chamber of Commerce? The American Chamber of Commerce Executives article public misunderstanding of its meaning.

There is an old adage in the

"Chambers of Commerce: The Basics" states "the term 'chamber of commerce' is one of the oldest and most well-recognized brands in the world, but there is significant chamber world: "If you've seen one chamber, you've seen one Chamber."

The ACCE article goes on to say "a chamber of commerce is an organization of businesses seeking to further their collective interests, while advancing their community, region, state or nation.

Business owners in towns, cities and other territories voluntarily form these local societies/networks to advocate on behalf of the community at large, economic prosperity and business interests.

Chambers have existed in the U.S. for more than two centuries, with many having been established before the jurisdictions they represent."

Chamber missions vary, but they all tend to focus to some degree on five primary goals: Building communities (regions/states/nations) to which residents, visitors and investors are attracted; Promoting those communities; Striving to ensure future prosperity via a pro-business climate; Representing the unified voice of the employer community; and Reducing transactional friction through well-functioning networks.

They share a common ambition for sustained prosperity of their community/region, built on thriving employers.

The mission of the Maysville-Mason County Area Chamber of Commerce is "to provide leadership and be a voice of the business community". We want all types of businesses to be a part of the Chamber. This enables the Chamber to represent the needs of an ever diversifying business community.

We invite any business to partner with us to promote the Maysville-Mason County area. Whether you are local or a regionally based business, you can have a stake in the activities of the Chamber. We need input from every type of business.

If you would like to join the Chamber, you can find an application on our website: www.maysvillekentucky.com or call the office, 606.564.5534, we will email or mail an application to you.

We are proud of our community but are always looking for ways to make it better and stronger. When we pool our resources, we are able to accomplish together what we could not do individually.

CEILINGS

“I personally like that look in the bedroom,” she says. “It’s a really unusual thing, but it makes a simple bedroom much more romantic and exciting.”

PAINT
If you have tall ceilings or want a cozy feel, extend the wall color onto the ceiling, or go bold and throw a darker or contrasting color up above to make the area appear smaller. “Color on the ceiling is not forbidden,” Bandon says. It’s “something you can play around with a bit.”
Go with a flat paint on ceilings to minimize light reflection and mask imperfections, says Puji Sherer of the eco-paint manufacturer YOLO Col-orhouse in Portland, Ore. “Since ceilings are not in danger of greasy finger-prints and the regular wear and tear that walls receive, higher gloss finishes are not necessary,” she says.

PANELING
For a classic New Eng-land cottage look, you can’t beat the charm of wood paneling such as beadboard on the ceiling.
Amy Matthews, a con-tractor and host of the DIY Network’s “Sweat Equity,” prefers the ease of gluing and nailing larger bead-board sheet panels to the ceiling rather than tacking up individual tongue-and-groove pieces.
The panels, which can be cut with a power or hand-saw, should be nailed to ceiling joists, and can then be stained or painted.
Bandon likes the look in bathrooms, where wain-scoted walls are common, or on front-porch ceilings, in a traditional light-blue color that was thought to keep insects away.

PRESSED-TIN PANELS
These are a popular ceil-ing option if you’re look-ing for a folksy, vintage feel, and they also come in larger patterned-metal sheets for easier installa-tion, Bandon says.
The panels can be nailed in place with a hammer or nail gun onto furring strips that must first be nailed up, according to this old-house.com.

Overlap the edges and seal the panels with a clear polyurethane or paint them with an oil-based paint.

DROP PANEL CEILING
Many people shudder at the thought of a drop panel ceiling, envisioning the white utilitarian grids and fluorescent lighting com-mon in 1960s basements and office buildings.
But Matthews says today’s drop ceilings are handsomer, designed in many more colors and textures. Several compa-nies even make individual panels in materials such as wood and tin that fit into existing metal grid systems, giving homeowners a cheaper way to bring their drop ceiling into the 21st century, Matthews says.

COFFERED CEILING
Originally used during the Renaissance and popu-larized in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, cof-fered ceilings are one of the more complex ceiling projects, but also the most formal and dramatic.

The process involves at-taching flat or more intri-cately molded beams to the ceiling to create a square, grid-like pattern that is then typically trimmed out with crown molding, Ban-don says.
It drops your ceilings down, so use caution in a small room, but it adds in-stant classic elegance to a dining or living room.
“It’s a great way to hide flaws in your ceiling,” Ban-don says. “It’s also a great way to hide duct work or something you have to put in your ceiling.”
Building a soffit box around the perimeter of a ceiling also can give the look of a layered, coffe-ried ceiling, says Ken Col-lier, editor-in-chief of The Family Handyman magazine.
Install recessed light-ing in the soffit box or run downlights along the top to make the light “kind of wash along the walls. It looks very dramatic,” Col-lier says.

ADVICE

Lover who won’t commit has every reason not to

DEAR ABBY: I’m a 45-year-old married woman with four kids. I fell in love with a longtime friend, “Hugh,” two years ago. He’s single and has never been married.
I told him I want a rela-tionship, but he says that since I’m married we can’t have one. I told him I love him, but he’s not sure he feels as strong about it as I do. We have been spend-ing a lot of time together and have started to get inti-mate.

I told Hugh I don’t want to just fool around — I want a com-mitment. He worries about my kids, and that if I leave their father they won’t un-derstand.

My husband is very cold and distant. We don’t say much to each other any-more; we’re just two adults living in the same house raising our kids. We have gone to counseling, but it didn’t help. My husband says things are fine — but they’re not.

I’m angry because Hugh is willing to fool around but not commit. He says this shouldn’t go on anymore and his heart isn’t in it. The fact that I’m married both-ers him. I told him to wait and eventually my hus-band and I will divorce. I’m hurt by his decision to back out. I feel he wanted the intimacy but doesn’t want ME, and I feel used. How do I sort this out? — USED IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR “USED”: You weren’t used — you threw yourself at Hugh, and what has happened was by mu-tual consent. Why would you expect a commitment from him when you haven’t shown yourself capable of sticking with one? I credit Hugh for his honesty — he hasn’t led you on. That you’re married SHOULD bother him.

When a man tells you his “heart” isn’t in it, trust me, the rest of him isn’t far behind. Don’t waste your time being hurt. Learn from this. You have unfin-ished business to attend to. Your marriage is a mess. If it doesn’t survive, you owe it to the next man in your life to be available before you start prospecting. If you’re not, this will happen to you again and again.

DEAR ABBY: A few days ago, my significant other, his 18-year-old daughter, “Maria,” and I were in our living room dis-cussing “Jonah,” a slightly older guy she has been dating and who spends a lot of time here. I told her I have high ex-pectations for her and think she can do a lot better than him.

I didn’t realize that Jo-nah was in the next room when I spoke my mind or that he had heard me. My boyfriend told me later that Jonah said, “Now I know how she really feels about me!”

Abby, he’s a nice kid, and he’s always welcome here. I feel terrible about hurting his feelings, even though my opinion about him not being good enough for Maria hasn’t changed. Still, I know the effect crass words can have on a young person, and I should have thought twice before opening my mouth.

Should I apologize to him for what I said? If so, what should I say? — HOOF IN MOUTH IN CALIFORNIA
DEAR HOOF IN MOUTH: What happened was regrettable. By all means apologize to Maria’s boyfriend for hurting his feelings. Tell him that you didn’t mean to be cruel, but that you would feel better about the relation-ship if he had higher goals. It might be the push he needs to raise his ambi-tions and become more successful in life when he’s older.

HOW YOU SEE IT

VOTE CAREFULLY

We had better be careful who we vote for next fall. The Republicans are going to cut Medicare and what are the older people going to do? They have to live on Medicare and it is a shame that they want to cut out on everything.

THANKS FOR THE HELPING HAND

I want to thank the persons who stopped their car and helped me at Goodwill Saturday when my husband fell and I couldn't get him up. I sure appreciate your kindness.

NAMES, PLEASE

Why don't you put the names under photos in the paper. We see groups of kids and don't know who they are.

GAS PAINS INCREASE

I don't know what we are going to do about the gas prices. I saw prices in this area at $3.98 a gallon over the weekend. This has to stop.

WATCH YOUR SPEED

There needs to be a speed limit in Valley View. They are driving too fast and some small children are going to get run over.

LET MAYOR DO HIS JOB

I think Harry Foxworthy will be a good mayor if they let him. There is always some council member who causes trouble.

ANOTHER SPIN ON THE SPIN

I enjoyed Mr. Castle's letter in the paper. Enjoyed reading his spin about the meeting of the things that went down in the council meeting. No way that they did not know about the property. There was nothing negative about Mr. Bramel. That is Mr. Castle's spin. He was aggravated and needs to get over it. He was out of line. He shouldn't have done it. He tries to put it in a format to make him look innocent.

ANOTHER GOOD DEED

Many thanks to the young man who weed-eated my fence row. I did not ask them but he did it on his own.

HIGH AND MIGHTY

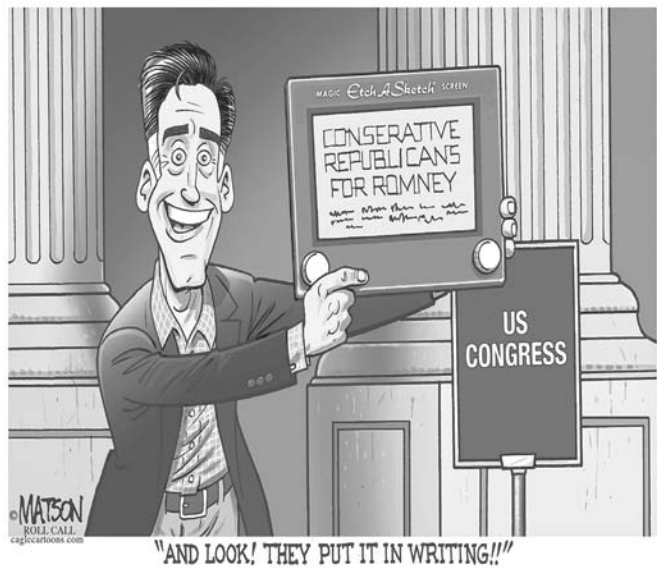

Fleming County Courthouse may have been mandated but the Fiscal Court 100 percent supported it. The new courthouse at Flemingsburg is a monument of poor judgment and extravagance.

KEEP IT QUIET

I heard on the news that President Obama told the Russian President that he would have more leeway and could do more after he was reelected. I don't think the president should tell a foreign country what he is going to do.

GO CATS

Soon we will see how wrong the sports commentators are about Kentucky. I hear so much negative about the Kentucky team and feel that the commentators are against us. We will prove them wrong one more time this week. I guess it is a jealousy thing, after all we have always done well and have a great following. No other school supports their teams like Kentucky fans.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

SAVE SHAWNEE FOREST

Dear editor,
The Division of forestry seems bound and determined to kill Shawnee Forest that they are supposed to be taking care of for us, the owners, the public. It just got three permits to burn 709 acres in Shawnee this spring March 10-April 20, 2012.
It's unconscionable for Forestry to burn in Shawnee. The trees are out of dormancy. Fire would boil the sap of even big ones and that would kill them eventually. Several bird species are already nesting on the ground. Turtles, reptiles and amphibians are out of hibernation. Wild flowers are blooming. all the invertebrates that help keep a forest ecosystem healthy and functioning are in the decomposing leaves on the forest floor.
Even when leaves are dry enough to carry a fire, living thinks are wet and logs are rotting and wet and full of life. With all the moisture, burning now would produce more unhealthy smoke with more harmful particulate matter and spores.
Please speak up for Shawnee and tell Forestry not to burn this spring. Chief Robert Boyles can be reached at the Division of Forestry, toll free phone 1-877-247-8733.

POLITICAL COMMENTARY

Down with Obamacare

SEN. MITCH MCCONNELL

But nearly two years after passage, Americans continue to find more things to dislike. Far from curing a rise in health-care costs, Obamacare is now expected to increase health-care spending by more than a quarter of a trillion dollars, and federal health-care spending and subsidies by nearly $400 billion.

On the two-year anniversary of Obamacare, Republicans in Congress are more committed than ever to repealing this unconstitutional law and replacing it with commonsense reforms that put health care back in the hands of individuals and doctors, instead of bureaucrats in Washington.

President Obama was right when he argued upon taking office that the U.S. health-care system was in critical need of reform. Among other problems were the rising cost of health care to private and public payers, the exposure of too many families to potentially catastrophic health-care costs, and the lack of coverage for millions of Americans.

Yet rather than solving the most pressing problems in the old system, Obamacare has made many of these problems far worse. Costs and premiums are rising, Medicare has been weakened, states now struggle to keep pace with even costlier federal mandates, and the economy is being sapped as new mandates dissuade employers from creating new jobs.

For these reasons and others, those of us who fought against Obamacare's passage look forward to making our case before the Supreme Court next week.

Americans continue to oppose Obamacare in large numbers. Indeed, a recent USA Today/Gallup poll showed that 72 percent of Americans, including most Democrats, believe that Obamacare's core, a government mandate to buy health insurance, violates the Constitution. This, along with a growing list of unintended consequences, are reason enough to repeal it.

But nearly two years after passage, Americans continue to find more things to dislike. Far from curing a rise in health-care costs, Obamacare is now expected to increase health-care spending by more than a quarter of a trillion dollars, and federal health-care spending and subsidies by nearly $400 billion. Health-care premiums for American families are expected to skyrocket by $2,100 per year.

And the White House has now admitted what they refused to acknowledge when they forced Obamacare into law: A key component of their deficit-reduction claims, the CLASS Act, can't possibly be implemented in a financially sustainable way. Now they tell us.

As for the law's broader impact on the economy, here too the reality has proven far less appealing than the president's rhetoric. Although the plan was sold as a cure-all for a broken health-care system, but as the foundation for a stronger economy, we now know that Obamacare has been one of the single biggest drags on job creation since early 2010.

According to the director of the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office, Obamacare means 800,000 fewer jobs over the next decade. One recent private-sector analysis concluded that the president's health-care law is "arguably the biggest impediment to hiring, particularly hiring of less skilled workers"

States face their own challenges. Many couldn't afford federal health-care mandates before Obamacare mandated dramatic increases in Medicaid rolls — and the costs to pay for it. Needless to say, even if states are able to meet the costs of covering as many as 25 million more Medicaid patients, the quality of the care for those who rely on Medicaid would almost certainly suffer.

The president may be able to boast that more people have coverage. But states, which will have to shoulder the costs, won't be applauding.

Nor will America's seniors, millions of whom now know from bitter experience that the president wasn't speaking to them when he vowed that, under Obamacare, "if you like the plan you have you can keep it." Since then, millions who have and like Medicare Advantage have learned it won't necessarily be there for them anymore.

Seniors have also heard one of the administration's own top Medicare analysts predict that one in six hospitals that honor Medicare could be in the red as a result of the new law, potentially jeopardizing Medicare recipients' access to care.

Time and again, the president and his allies have arrogantly presumed that a public that has largely opposed Obamacare from the start would either come to like it or forget about it over time. Their hopes never materialized.

Why? Because most Americans understood from the start that the president's claims about this plan simply weren't credible. Chief among them was his insistence that it wouldn't add a dime to the deficit. Americans aren't stupid. They know that a government entitlement is about as likely to pay for itself as, well, a government entitlement.

Indeed, the more he repeated his promises the more skeptical Americans became. Months after then-speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi's now-famous claim that Congress would have to pass Obamacare in order for Americans to find out what was in it, voters registered their own verdict on the bill in one of the biggest wave elections in U.S. history. As if there were any doubt about this, a recent academic study put it to rest by concluding that Obamacare was the primary reason for the drubbing.

And for good reason. President Obama was right to attempt a reform. But Obamacare has turned out to be even worse than many of us predicted, and the unintended consequences and hidden surprises keep coming. Two years after its passage, Americans have made their views on Obamacare perfectly clear. They don't like it, they believe it's unconstitutional, and they want it repealed. Let's clear the way and start over.

POLITICAL COMMENTARY

Voice lessons aren't getting any easier

PETER FUNT

What strikes me as a cruel twist is that the presumably live offshore operators seem to be trained to speak English just like robots.

Back in the eighties our family had a Chrysler station wagon with limited vocabulary and laughably stilted pronunciation. We'd jump in and the car would declare in a halting voice, "A door is a jar." That made us laugh, and it prompted my sister to quip, "I always thought a door was a toaster."

Dad's car was easy to live with because it didn't have a human name, and it never talked back.

Now, many of my friends can't go more than a few miles without checking with Siri, the fawning female who resides in iPhones. Even if you don't own the device you've undoubtedly seen TV commercials in which Siri flirts with a young musician and coos, "I will call you Rock Star."

These voices have been creeping up on us for some time. I used to look forward to hearing the "You've got mail" guy at AOL — who peaked around the time he starred in a movie with Meg Ryan and Tom Hanks — but lately he seems out of touch.

Several companies now use the phone voice I first heard at United Airlines: the guy who cheerfully repeats the same questions over and over, apparently hoping you'll hang up in frustration before reaching an actual person, probably in the Philippines. You feel like you've won some sort of contest when he finally says, "OK. I'll get an agent for ya!"

What strikes me as a cruel twist is that the presumably live offshore operators seem to be trained to speak English just like robots.

I'm fascinated by the sheer endurance of the airport woman who spends the day repeating eight gloomy words: "The moving sidewalk is coming to an end."

I feel kind of sorry for my old answering machine who's so senile it takes her forever just to spit out, "End ... of ... messages."

I was surprised recently to discover that my Mac computer can read whatever is on my screen in 100 different voices, each of which Apple has thoughtfully given a human name. The default guy is Alex, but right now I'm listening to Serena — who I imagine is 5-foot-10 with long dark hair — reading this column with her sultry British accent.

The first machine to really give me the heebie-jeebies was Watson, the I.B.M. smarty-pants who beat people named Brad and Ken on Jeopardy last year. Watson sat there smugly, using his ultra-speedy buzzer capability and lightning recall to win more than three times his nearest human competitor.

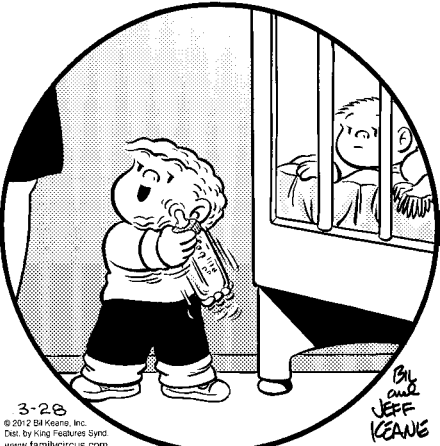

A company called Zazu is now marketing a mobile alarm clock that wakes you with a female voice delivering not only the time but also news and weather — even details of what your friends are saying on social networks. The Zazu lady also reads a commercial, something I suspect was a human's bright idea.

Audi vehicles now come with a "multimedia interface" on the dashboard that fields spoken questions from drivers. Audi says it is now working on a system that recognizes and adapts to the motorist's state of mind to determine if the driver is stressed by a traffic situation.

Personally, I'm stressed when a gadget talks to me, no matter how bad the traffic happens to be. I continue to believe that machines should be seen but not heard.

The bidding:
South 1 NT West Pass North 2 ♣ East Pass
2 ♥ Pass 6 ♥

Opening lead — king of spades.

Consider this deal where South is declarer at six hearts. The contract cannot be made against best defense, yet there is a real possibility to make the slam if declarer sets the stage properly.

Let's say you're South and win West's king-of-spades lead with the ace. East playing the five. You draw three rounds of trumps and then cash the A-K-Q of diamonds and A-K of clubs, ending in your hand. At this point you lead a low spade toward dummy's 9-4, and West, who holds the Q-10 of spades, must decide which of them to play.

If he makes the normal play of the ten, you make the slam! East must win with the jack, and since his only remaining cards are the Q-10-7 of clubs, he must lead one of them. This allows you to discard a spade from one hand while you ruff in the other, and the slam is home.

If West is smart enough to play his queen when you lead the spade toward dummy, he defeats you, but it has cost you nothing in the process to present him with an opportunity to make an error.

Actually, West has a very difficult decision to make when you lead the spade. From his point of view, he should play the ten if he thinks you started with the J-6-3, and the queen if he thinks you started with 8-6-3. West might guess right, or he might guess wrong, but at least he should be given the chance to go astray. Lots of points — 1,530 of them — ride on his decision.

Tomorrow: A crucial play.

HOROSCOPE by Frances Drake

- ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
Remember that the next month is your turn to recharge your batteries for the rest of the year, because the Sun is in your sign. Do make the most of this!
- TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Work alone or behind the scenes so you have time to strategize what you want your new year (birthday to birthday) to be all about. How do you want it to be different from last year?
- GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
The month ahead is a much more popular time for you! Accept all invitations. Enjoy schmoozing with others. Discuss your dreams for the future with others.
- CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
People definitely will notice you more in the month ahead (especially bosses, parents, teachers and VIPs). Furthermore, they think you look great!
- LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)
Travel will please you in the next few weeks, because you're interested in expanding your horizons. You want adventure and an opportunity to learn something new. Yes!
- VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
Focus on red-tape details about inheritances, wills, estates, banking, insurance matters, taxes and shared property. You have the energy and patience to tackle this now.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
In the month ahead, you will have to get more sleep than usual. The Sun (your source of energy) is now as far away from your sign as it gets all year.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
You have high energy now to work hard to get better organized. This same energy translates into a desire to improve your health as well. Go, go, go!

- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
A playful month ahead is promising for your sign. Enjoy romance, love affairs, vacations, fun times with children and all sports events. Yeehaw!
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
For the next six weeks or so, your focus will be on home, family and domestic matters. Entertain at home. You also might want to redecorate.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
The pace of your days definitely will accelerate during the next five to six weeks. Just accept this and go with the flow. Short trips, errands and increased reading and writing are likely.
- PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20)
"Show me the money!" You're definitely focused on working hard to boost your earnings now and in the next month. This is good, because you can be successful.
- YOU BORN TODAY
You have two personas: One that is public and one that is private. (You fiercely protect your private life.) You are hardworking and independent, and you work well with others. Friendships matter to you. Many of you are highly original and artistic.
